Interestingly enough; they got their name, back in 1998, from a poem one of their friends wrote about ... fiddlin' John and guitar Bill. Today they're considered the quintessential cowboy band, with impeccable references.

Bill Barwick is the Academy of Western Artists' 2005 Male Vocalist of the Year. A returning guest at some of America's best known venues, Bill tours nationally. Not surprisingly, he's also the on-air spokesperson for the popular Starz/Encore Westerns television-channel.

He's joined by one of the American West's true music legends, the incomparable Johnny Neill on fiddle, and, longtime friend Steve McCartney on string bass.

Together they blend the sound of the traditional cowboy song with the energy and freshness of the best in today's western music, including some of Bill's own tunes.

Collectively, Bill's discography includes 7 different CD titles and a songbook of his own published work.
